Editorial Quality

Judge Number One

This newsletter does a good job with both feature and editorial content. Grammar and application of consistent style is well done.

I appreciated the themes and think they're a great idea to help members create an open forum for the issues that affect technical communicators today.

Judge Number Two

Found your articles to be very informative and useful.

Judge Number Three

This was overall very good editorially. I particularly liked the "And That's How I Became a Technical Writer" article—it would make an interesting regular column!

Design and Delivery

Judge Number One

I noticed some big changes between last year's archived editions of the Capital Letter and this year. Making big changes like you have takes courage and an eye for detail, and in many cases, your changes have resulted in significant improvements for this newsletter.

Judge Number Three

I liked the page that had the links to all the newsletters, particularly how it has the pertinent information on the web page as well as within the PDF files.
